

| Object(Noun) | “is a(n)” | Sub-Branch(Adjective) | Branch(Adjective) | Family(Noun) | “which” | Function(Verb) | “by means | Functional Elements(Prepositional Phrase) | “which is” | Phases(Verbs) |
|------------------|-----------|---------------------------|-----------------------|------------------|---------|--------------------|-----------|---|------------|-------------------|
|                  |           |                           |                       |                  |         |                    |           |   |            |                   |
|                  |           |                           |                       |                  |         |                    |           |   |            |                   |
|                  |           |                           |                       |                  |         |                    |           |   |            |                   |
|                  |           |                           |                       |                  |         |                    |           |   |            |                   |

Functional Analysis Template: A structural formula or template for creating one-sentence descriptions and definitions of artifacts or processes. After John F. Birk (1981) by Ruben G. Mendoza (2002).